Know your neighbours

Your neighbours can help when you need it most.

Making a connection with your neighbours before a disaster happens can reduce stress and improve everyone's safety and wellbeing.

Meeting your neighbour

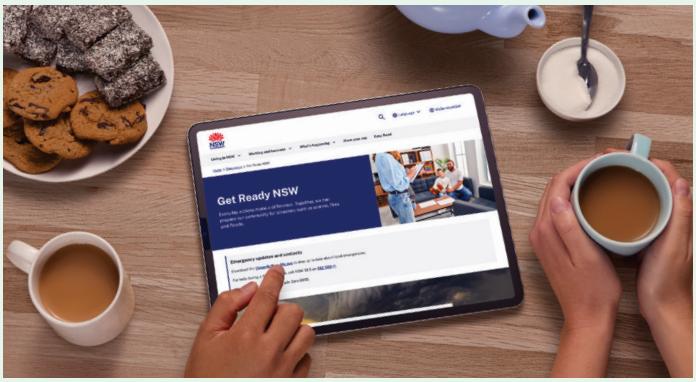

Knocking on a neighbour's door and introducing yourself is a great way to start building connections.

When meeting your neighbours and others in your local area, share the details below so they can easily contact you.

- Name
- Address
- Phone number

If you don't feel comfortable approaching your neighbour directly, write down your details and drop them in your neighbours letterbox to start the conversation.

Regularly checking in, especially after bad weather, is a great way to offer support and ensure the safety of those around you.

Sharing information and resources

Sharing information and resources with your neighbours can make a big difference during disasters. Here are some things you can share that may help you and your neighbours.

- Radio
- Hose
- Blankets
- Pantry items and food
- First aid supplies
- Land, garage, shelter and other storage spaces
- Help with relocating pets and livestock.
